Seattle is a growing community committed to progressive values. The Social Justice Film Festival showcases brave and creative films that explore injustice around the world. Born out of the prisoner justice movement, the festival remains committed to that cause and also features a broad array of social justice films through the support of local organizations and sponsors. Our 2018 theme is HOPE & DEMOCRACY. The festival also engages audiences in panels and discussions designed to educate and spur critical social change.

Where ART meets SOCIAL JUSTICE

We support filmmaking as an art form and a platform to engage audiences in social change

Since 2013, we have...

• Screened 228 films as part of 85 free and ticketed events at 12 locations across Seattle, including Cinerama, The Majestic Bay, NW Film Forum, The Pacific Science Center, and the Northwest African American Museum

• Been featured in local media, including the Seattle Times, City Arts, The Stranger, Real Change, UW Daily, KBCS 91.3, and KEXP 90.3, resulting in thousands of unique impressions

• Hosted notable special guests: Sister Helen Prejean, Danny Glover, Jose Antonio Vargas, Will Potter, Pramila Jayapal, Sanjay Rawal, Aaron Dixon, and Darnell Moore

• Received sponsorships from more than 50 national and local non-profits and businesses

• Provided an artistic forum for filmmakers from all over the world

• Promoted the art of digital storytelling and documentary through cultivation of youth films

Become an Official Sponsor

With your support in 2018, we will host the most compelling and memorable festival yet.

Over the last six years, the Social Justice Film Festival has built a strong network of partnerships with non-profits and other organizations devoted to the cause of social justice through an artistic medium. From direct financial support as a sponsor to providing in-kind goods and services, there are many ways to make a tax-deductible contribution and link your organization’s name and logos with the social justice and film community.

One of the best festivals in which I have had the honor, and the pleasure, to take part... Depth and research—essential elements for a festival that deals with social issues—give the SJFF authoritativeness and prestige.
